By Sophie Brumbaugh

On Wednesday, October 10, a select group of Rock Port High School students were inducted into the National Honor Society. The organization is sponsored by Mrs. Megan Bebb and Mrs. Jackie Miller.

Induction was led by the members who were inducted last fall. These students include Riley Vogler, president; Ayden Wilroy, vice-president; Josie Watkins, secretary; Zachary Clauson, treasurer; Brock Martin, student council representative; Ashley Cue, historian; and Katie Lininger, liaison officer. The "Blue Jay Singers," sophomore RyAnne Herron; juniors Bekah Lucas, Summer Greenwalt, and Gage Maxwell; and senior Josie Watkins provided entertainment at induction. After induction, attendees enjoyed refreshments.

The students who were inducted include juniors Alex Burke, Beth Davis, Cody Davis, Gabriel Minter, William Oswald, and Darius Skillen and senior Preston Jones. Academic achievements, leadership skills, service record and high character qualify students to become members.

Senior Ashley Cue lights the candle representing "Character" at National Honor Society Induction.

"The students must make contributions to the school and community without compensation, they must demonstrate reliability, courtesy, respect for others...[they] need to be resourceful and have good problem solving skills" (nhs.us). As part of our local chapter, these students will complete at least 10 hours of individual service as well as contribute to chapter service projects.
